

Jack Cornish

Jack Cornish is a programme manager for the “Don’t Lose your Way” campaign at Ramblers, the UK charity promoting walking and defending rights of way. That’s the ‘day job’, but there is much more walking in Jack than just from 9 to 5. He is walked the entire length of the British Isles and is walking every street in London. The interview opens with Andrew Stuck asking Jack what “Don’t Lose Your Way” is all about and what his role entails. 22’06" 10.4MB

Jack walked through the British Isles from Land’s End to John O’Groats - approximately walking 1,500 miles in four months <https://www.jackcornish.com/hit-the-road-jack-1>

In trying to walk every street in London, Jack uses an A-Z London street atlas as his ‘definitive map’ of London. You can follow Jack’s progress on his website: <https://www.jackcornish.com/london>

Two walks suggested by Jack:

In London:

1. The Brockley Three peaks that include Blythe Hill, Hilly Fields and One Tree Hill and also passes through Ladywell Fields. <https://www.ramblers.org.uk/go-walking/find-a-walk-or-route/walk-detail.aspx?walkID=3975516>
